Re: Support of current net neutrality rules

Chairman Pai;

I am writing in opposition to the proposed rule change the FCC will be considering tomorrow. Internet Service Providers should not be allowed to create fast lanes or slow lanes based on which content producers pay them the most.

I have little choice in my area for high speed internet access. Comcast and AT&T have a firm duopoly over the market. Allowing these companies to make the rules concerning my access is totally anathema to why the internet was created.

I urge you to reconsider your position. Large internet service providers like Comcast and AT&T should be regulated under Title II and classified as common carriers and all the regulation that carries with those designations should be applied as strongly as possible.

Regards,

Kevin Johnson
